

Dear Sir, Will you kindly allow me a question touching the opinion of Sir W. Crookes on the Spiritualistic theories? Though that eminent scientist acknowledges the veracity of the Spiritualistic phenomena and even admits that the intelligence governing these phenomena lead to the belief that it does not emanate from any person present, I ignore if he ever made the statement, that he is a Spiritualist. The article in "Light" May 12, 1900, page 223 does not give me the information wanted, as it only mentions what we, Spiritualists, the conclusions to be made from his "Researches", but it does not give an opinion from ~~his own~~ ^{himself}. As far as I know, he never opposed to our calling him a Spiritualist, but did he ever do so himself? And if so, where is his statement to be found? In answering these questions you will greatly oblige 11 Jan 1902 Yours truly
J. E. F.
